The International Society of Participatory Mapping (ISPM) conference brings together scholars, planners and practitioners working with participatory mapping and spatial participatory methods. Hosted by Aalto University in Finland, the 2019 conference provides a platform for presenting the most recent advances within the field of participatory mapping, and initiating discussion on the current state and future directions of the research.

With the theme “Let the people map”, the ISPM 2019 Conference invites us to approach these questions with a special focus on novel ways of facilitating dialog between participatory mapping researchers and practitioners beyond academic settings.

Topics of the 2019 Conference include:

- Mapping Ecosystem Services
- Planning Support Systems
- Participatory Mapping Methodology and Analytics
- Indigenous Mapping
- Geodesign
- Public Participation
- Natural Resource Management and Conservation
- Accessibility & Mobility

...And Many More!
